

THE LEWIS CENTER FOR EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH CELEBRATES THE NEW SCHOOL YEAR!

As we start the new school year at the Lewis Center for Educational Research, we wish to celebrate the accomplishments of twin sisters Dana and Cori McFadden (left to right), who are attending the Air Force Academy after graduating from the Lewis Center with high honors this spring. Dana, who knew she wanted to go into the Air Force since seventh grade, was the co-valedictorian of her class. Cori plans to become a flight surgeon. Each of these remarkable young leaders were members of the JROTC, had grade point averages above 4.0, were members of the National Honor Society and Kitty Hawk Air Society, and were awarded the Presidential Education Award and Golden State Seal. We salute Dana and Cori, who have set a great example for all the Lewis Center students who will follow their lead and aim high to become the leaders of tomorrow!
