Funny faces featured at film festival

Students, family and friends watch the out-takes reel at the start of the 9th annual Lewis Center Student Film Festival on Friday night at the Academy for Academic Excellence in Apple Valley. Thirty-three movies were shown, all made by students from start to finish. The school offers four separate film courses in which students learn all facets of the trade. Sponsors Desert Community Bank and Patty Pinkstaff made prize money possible for the winners of the competition, which was judged by area professionals in the film field.
